AREA PUBLIC LIBRARIES SUMMER READING PROGRAMS

CHILDREN WHO ARE READ TO AT HOME HAVE A HIGHER SUCCESS RATE IN SCHOOL.

Parents and other family members can engage in home literacy activities with their children in different ways, such as by reading; telling stories; teaching letters, words, or numbers; or visiting a library. This Fast Fact presents parent-reported information on the extent to which 3 to 5-year-olds who are not yet enrolled in kindergarten engage with a family member in literacy activities at home.

Based on parent reports in 2012, many young children engaged in home literacy activities with members of their family. In the week before the survey was conducted, some 83 percent of children ages 3 to 5 who were not yet enrolled in kindergarten were read to by a family member three or more times. Also, 98 percent were taught letters, words, or numbers; 86 percent did arts and crafts; and 83 percent were told a story by a family member at least once in the past week. In 2012, some 42 percent of children ages 3 to 5 visited a library with a family member at least once in the month before the survey.
